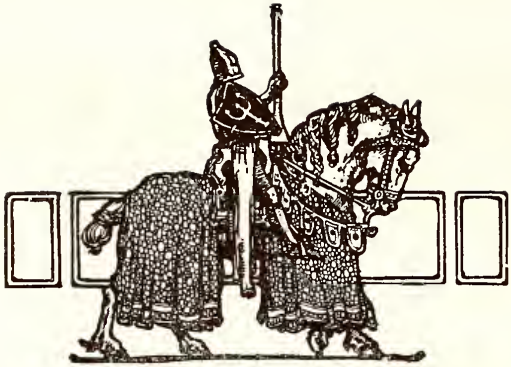
Foreword

To provide for the Students of Loyola a storehouse whither they may turn in future years to refresh pleasant memories of the year 1927-28—

Such has been the purpose of the Editors of this 1928 Wolf.



Dedication

To the Men of the Marquette Association—

Men who through fidelity to a Catholic ideal and devotion to education, banded together to help found a Catholic University in New Orleans;

Who labored faithfully under the mighty impulse of that vision;

Who delight to-day in the thought of a dream realized; the Loyola of the present—

this

1928 Wolf

is gratefully dedicated.

The President's Message

STUDENTS of Loyola, we welcome you; graduates of Loyola, we bid you farewell and God-speed.

Through your years with us we have labored with you and for you; we have held up the ideals of a Christian Education; we have led you by precept and example to be searchers of Knowledge and lovers of Truth, examples of Christian Living.

Be faithful to these ideals. Let your Mind be pure, filled with the light of learning; let your Heart be noble and strong with worthy emotions; let your will be free and bold in following conscience's voice and the narrow path of Duty.

Love God; be kind to every man, who is God's image; be true to yourself and fear no mortal thing. With firm Faith, buoyant Hope and all-embracing Charity, serve God and your fellow-man,—your church and your country—and success will crown your life.

Roland Artigues

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

A man of few words and few actions who follows the path of least resistance. At times a bit cynical but nevertheless, easy to get along with.

Howard F. Bogner

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Sodality, '24-'27; Dramatic Club, '25-'27. He accepts with characteristic philosophy the loss of his crowning glory. Dignity is his reward. A student and scholar who should be praised.

Louie Boyer

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Sodality, '24-'27.
The same "Louie" yesterday, today and tomorrow. A favorite with members of both sexes, especially the weaker. The gay Lothario of the class.

Henry Planchard Decell

BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

A new arrival who works hard. He believes in standing up for his opinions, and does it ably. And his opinions are not foolish.

Theodore Dimitry

$\Delta\ \Phi\ \Sigma$, $\Delta\ \Theta\ \Phi$

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Sodality, '24-'27; President Delta Phi Sigma.
Sober and persevering. His dignified bearing should help him amid the intricacies of law. We who are departing wish him success.

Joseph J. Murphy, Jr.

PALESTINE, TEX.

Secretary-Treasurer Senior Class, Librarian Band, '27, '28.

A quiet, dependable fellow willing to work for his share of knowledge. Whenever Murphy says something, you can be sure that he means it. A very Irishman.

Leon Sarpy

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Sodality, '25-'27; "Wolf," '26-'28; Varsity Baseball, '26.

"Leon" is a hard worker who has dug for his "stuff" and been quite successful. Always busy, and is a thoroughly capable man.

Malcolm P. Schwarzenbach

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

A splendid actor, especially in feminine roles. He has a good mind and a touch of the "grand manner" which are bound to carry him far in life.

Eugene M. Soniat

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Sodality, '25-'27.

"Eugene" is as quiet and yet as likable a man as we have in our class. We cannot say too much in praise of his disposition and his scholarly, gentlemanly bearing.

Cornelius P. Voorhies

NEW IBERIA, LA.

Varsity Football, '25; Baseball, '26; Track, '27; "Maroon," '26-'28; Band, '24-'28; Dramatic Club, '26, '27; Sodality, '24-'27.

The pride of the Teche country is before you, ambitious and full of work. His ability and tenacity will carry him far.

History of the Senior Arts and Sciences Class

By Howard Bogner and Malcolm Schwarzenbach

A brief four years ago on a sunny September morning, the Freshman Class of '25, some thirty-odd staring youngsters, first met in the halls of Loyola. For some of us this was but a reunion, having spent several years together in High School—for others it was a meeting with strangers, strangers who were destined to become friends in the years that followed.

Then began for us a period of getting acquainted with classes and professors; a time during which we wandered around in somewhat of a daze, in a new world, one of learning, in which, as one kindly professor said: "There is so much to learn, and so little time in which to learn it."

Beguiled by the intricacies of Freshman Math, the pleasures of English Literature and the interesting facts of History, our Freshman year passed by, and when we returned as Sophomores, it was with the feeling of children coming home. We felt that we belonged, that we were part of the institution. Most of us now entered into more serious fields of endeavor, the Sciences. A few, the most ambitious, entered into the throes of Chemical research, while others, lazier ones, felt inclined to Biological Sciences. Some few of us even began the study of Philosophy, and then began for us a new world of wonderful study, a vista of intriguing thought, sometimes difficult, but always of deepest interest.

By our Junior year, our number was sadly diminished. The business world had allured a few, and several had left to study medicine at other schools. Unfortunately, then, they missed one of the really remarkable lecture courses that we have had: our second year of Philosophy. The different paths through the intricacies of Psychology were made pleasant by a man who so combined Poetry with Philosophy that study was diversion more than labor. Now too, we learned to look upon the Sciences as something vital, living, intimately connected with our every-day life. We were at length becoming real students. Then came our Senior year, a year of regret for some, of happiness for others; regret on the part of those who had idled somewhat and must now, as Longfellow's storied character "Sit night after night and blear their eyes with books"—happiness for those who had worked faithfully and could now stroll through their Senior year with dignified ease.

Now we begin to look about us and to ponder over the changes that four short years had wrought in us, in our surroundings, in our fellow students, and as we saw the new, eager faces of the underclassmen rushing about the campus, we felt grandly superior and incredibly old; but when we considered how limited our knowledge was, compared to that of the men who taught us, we felt strangely young and foolish, and recalled what one of them had said four years before: "There is so much to learn, and our time is so short!"

Now we are going forth into the shadowy future, without fear, and as men, for despite our shortcomings as scholars, we have certainly acquired that intangible but powerful something which is not found in text books or in words, but rather in the close association with God-fearing men such as it has been our opportunity to be taught by—and that something we call Purpose—a Purpose to do and to succeed, not for self gain or glory or the emulation of man, but,

AD MAJOREM DEI GLORIAM.

History of the Senior Dental Class

By L. G. Roelling

ENIOR year, graduation, and our goal is reached. We have finished the course that has been given us and are now ready to step forward upon the pathway of life. For four years we have divided joys and sorrows, ever looking forward to this time as a glad one, forgetting that it was to mean a time of parting.

On a memorable September morning in 1924 the vanguard of this '28 class advanced on Loyola. We, an original eighteen, started out determined and tenacious, but were soon to learn that the road a Freshman travels is rocky and beset with danger. One of the greatest joys experienced during this year was our well-earned triumph over the hated Sophs in the annual tug-of-war. Our class was also well represented in the University Choir, a then very active organization. Never letting our banner trail, we moved on leaving behind a record of Freshmen activity and two of our number.

As Sophomores we again became eighteen when Barrodale and Richards transferred to Loyola, and, taking life a little more seriously, we managed to finish a most strenuous year with but two more falling by the wayside.

With our Junior year came realization, and too, new students from far and near. These were: Louis Cohen, from Memphis; Albert Harper, from Shreveport; Abraham Kramer, from New Jersey; and Olaf Loikrec, from the distant fields of Canada—all eager to fall in with the old gang. We distinguished ourselves athletically in this year by winning the championship in the intra-mural football tournament. Our greatest joy, however, was found in the fact that our class had achieved for itself one of the most impressive scholastic records in the history of the Loyola Dental School.

Finally we are Seniors . . . . real Seniors, and twenty-five of us, that is, of course, with the five new members we have just taken on. Miss Eileen Annis, of Canada; Blaine Bishop, of Baltimore; Charles McAnally, of North Carolina; Hajime Mitsumori, of Japan; and Charles Smith, from North Dakota. We had the honor of being the only class to fill three positions on the Student Council, our representatives being Jackson, who is also the President of the Council, Roeling, who acts in the capacity of Secretary, and Clark.

The sands of time flow endlessly on and on, our four years are up, and the time has come when we must go. On up our separate paths alone, may higher grades claim each and every one of us. Then, let us not forget our comradeship, but ever hold in memory dear as life, the happy hours which blessed our college days, which made us friends forever though apart. Let us be true to all that we have learned as we climb onward to victories still ahead. True to our Alma Mater, our class and to ourselves . . . True to all the world. At the parting of the ways, "Farewell."

History of the Senior Law Class

Alexis Dumestre

N a bright September morning in 1925, thirty young men and ladies presented themselves in Marquette Hall for enrollment in the first Day Law Class of Loyola University.

After attending the introductory lectures, the class elected officers. Maurice Lottinger was honored with the office of President, Marshall Brown, Vice-President, and Plauche Villere, Secretary-Treasurer. Later, Charles Cotten was elected our representative on the Student Council.

During the early part of the school year. two of our members withdrew. One of these, Henry Neubig, being awakened to the fact that he could best serve mankind from the altar than the bar, deserted us for the portals of a seminary. The other, Marshall Brown, succumbed to the lure of Dan Cupid and with this added responsibility had to give up his studies.

The final examinations in May struck us with the fury of a September storm, taking as its toll seven of our fellow students. Our Freshman year ended with a banquet at Turci's.

September, 1926, found us back in the fold again, firmly convinced we had a good foundation for the study of law, especially after completing the reading of Blackstone's Commentaries assigned for summer reading.

Four members of the night school transferred to our class at the beginning of this term, bringing the enrollment of the First Junior Day Law Class to thirty members. At the first meeting of the class, Alexis C. Dumestre was elected President, Anthony Schiro, Vice-President, and Plauche Villere was re-elected Secretary and Treasurer.

Under the guidance of the above officers, the Junior Class had a very successful year, and, like the Senior Class of 1927 that compiled all the important acts of the Louisiana Legislature, which was very helpful to them in taking the Louisiana Bar Examination, our class, through the suggestion of our president and with the untiring efforts of our professor, Hon. William H. Byrnes, compiled all the questions and answers of the important articles in the civil code, which has proven very popular with the Law Students of the two other Universities of this state, the achievement of which our class can feel proud. The May examinations found us better prepared and as a result, only three of our members were lost.

Again, in 1927, we returned to the stately portals of Loyola in the hope of departing with the coveted LL.B. During the Summer, we had kept busy reading decisions and opinions rendered in celebrated cases, upon which we were required to pass an examination before entering the Senior Class.

Alexis C. Dumestre, President, Lubin Laurent, Vice-President, Theodore Bergeron, Secretary, and William McDermott, Treasurer, were the officers elected to pilot our Senior year. A new policy was adopted this year in the form of mid-term examinations. The results of the exams have placed a few of us in precarious positions, but there is no doubt the difficulty will be overcome in the final examinations.

In Athletics, our class was ably represented, especially on the undefeated Maroon Cyclone of 1926, by Red Gremillon, alternate-captain, and "Tony" Schiro, plunging fullback. We also had the distinction of having Alexis Dumestre selected as manager of the Varsity Football Team of 1927. Our class was also well represented on the Maroon, Law Journal, and University Band.

This is meant to be a history of our class, but in reality it is merely a preface to the history that will be made by the members thereof. In passing, we take advantage of this opportunity to thank the members of the faculty for their efforts and patience in making this history possible. It is our hope that we shall be able to follow the example and professional ideals of these men exhibited both in the classroom and at the bar.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Class Secretary-Treasurer, '27, '28; Secretary Lambda Tau Lambda, '27; Pharmacy Club, '28.

"Puzzle" came to Loyola after making an enviable record in the service of "Uncle Sam" during the war. After solving this puzzle, she tackled those of the Pharmacy Profession, which she has solved with little or no difficulty for the last three years. Success is another name for "Puzzle" as it seems always to be her associate.

"A. B.," like his initials, was always first in his undertakings—social, scholastic and athletic. His popularity won for him the office of Class President in his Freshman and Senior years. On the football field, he was the center of attraction, but his progress will be still more closely followed by his classmates as he plays the more serious game of life.

John T. Cardno

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

"Domino" has managed to hide his good qualities from the world under a cloak of modesty, but we who have come to know him intimately, will remember how whole-heartedly he has entered into all the activities of the class, and so, we confidently predict a great future for him.

What a blessing it was to the Class of '28 to have had Sister Irene as a member! When trying problems came before the class it was to Sister Irene that they were brought and it was here that they were solved. Her classmates can never repay her for the assistance that she rendered them.

New inventions in the world of pill-pounding are expected shortly after "Steve" goes into business. The qualities of inventor, chemist and pharmacist make up this most pleasing personality. Though we hate to part with him, we know that the world needs him more, and that our selfishness could not be endured. Be yourself, Steve, and your fame is assured.

Isabel has held important offices during her stay on the campus at Loyola. Being possessed of wit, humor, and an amiable disposition, her name was always on the lips of her friends. In parting, a loud chorus of "Good Luck and Prosperity" is sung into her ears by all her classmates.

History of the Senior Pharmacy Class

By Isabel Roach

T was in September, 1925, that twenty boys and girls registered in the School of Pharmacy and what a green conglomeration of Freshmen we were! Looking back, we can well afford to laugh at the dreams with which each mind was then filled. Everyone thought, "Gee, what a cinch this course is going to be, and just wait until we finish—why we're going to revolutionize Pharmacy—and won't we startle the world with our inventions and discoveries!"

Now came the second year, and what a sorrowful gathering! For we found that some of our fellow classmates had given up the struggle and had decided to invade other fields, letting the other fellows, now numbering fifteen, further the advancement of Pharmacy. It was in this year that Aubrey Budge, that trustworthy halfback, put our class "on the map." Though small in stature, no man was too big for Aubrey to tackle; and, like the "Northwest Mounted Police," he always got his man.

But Budge is not the only one in our class. Take Remy Gross for instance. Volumes can be said of him. When one was troubled with some matter in Chemistry, all that was necessary was a word with Remy, and presto! the worries vanished! For when it comes to solving puzzles, Remy Florian Gross could rival the late Houdini himself. It was also in this year that our Holy Father, the Pope, wished to meet a representative of true Catholic manhood from every Jesuit school. Frank Fazzio was chosen from our class, but was eliminated in the final voting.

Football was not the only branch of athletics that our class went in for. When a Handball Tournament was started in April, Ragusa and John Cardno, two well-known Jesuit High graduates, forged to the front. But like Fazzio, sad but true, they were defeated. Our representatives in the field of literary activities were Dot Dunn and Isabel Roach, both members of the Maroon Staff. Truly, our class is remarkable!

Another vacation rolled by and when we assembled before our beloved dean, Doc Grasser, we found that the tradition of "Dignified Seniors" was to be upheld by only nine. This year, another discovery was made. It seems that we had had a dormant chemist in our midst, but it took Quantitative Lab to wake him, and once out of the state of coma, he managed to keep just one procedure ahead of the rest of the class. And that stellar personality is Albert Perez.

And what about our trained nurse who ministered to our boys in the World War? Well, we might state right now that our hats are off to Chlotilde Beaud, the helpful friend of all mankind.

Now, dear friends, we have a surprise for you. Perhaps you have wondered why we have been so successful in our studies. Well, we happen to be so blessed because of our classmate, that holy spouse of God, Sister Irene.

We have now come to the eve of graduation, our eyes begin to fill, and it is with a leaden heart that we bid farewell to our dear Dean, and our beloved Alma Mater. For that green congregation of Freshmen has given place to serious-minded men and women who fully realize their responsibilities and now go forth into the world fully equipped with a knowledge of pharmacy.

CLARK D. SHAUGHNESSY, Head Coach

The high esteem in which Shaughnessy is held in other sections of the country is manifested by the words of "Chick" Meehan, head coach at New York University, Knute Rockne of Notre Dame, and "Doc" Spears of Minnesota, all of whom visited the Loyola mentor at various times during the past year. Meehan expressed the opinion that the signing of Shaughnessy to pilot the Maroon machine was the most beneficial move ever taken by the local Athletic Council.

Last season, his first at the reins of the Wolfpack, Shaughnessy was handicapped by an unfamiliarity with his players and an epidemic of injuries which deprived him of the services of his most consistent performers in one game after another, but despite this handicap, his charges dropped only two contests. Next fall, with a formidable array of material and a great schedule, an even brighter season is anticipated.

JAMES EDWARD REED, Associate Coach

Eddie Reed, a native Orleanian, received his early football training at the Jesuit High School and later at Springhill and Tulane, where he captained the Green eleven in his senior year, and was named All-Southern center. He came to Loyola as freshman coach in 1925, and his yearling outfit blazed a trail to the Louisiana frosh title by virtue of sweeping victories over all opponents save Vanderbilt, with whom they played a scoreless tie. Reed was promoted to the position of head coach in 1926, graduating along with his freshman gridders, whom he combined with the varsity to mould the two into another unbeaten team. They swept to ten convincing victories in as many starts, defeating elevens from all sections of the country and bringing to Loyola the first unbeaten team in history.

With the advent of Coach Shaughnessy, Reed was retained in the capacity of Associate Coach.

TRAINER "SHORTY" WEST

FOOTBALL TEAM

Captain Ritchey

Captain-Elect Miller

Manager Dumestre

Captain Bill Ritchey

Bill experienced his best season in 1927 as captain of the Wolf-pack. Recognized as perhaps the best guard ever to don the Maroon and Gold, he has been the backbone of the line for two years now, and gives promise of having an even greater season next fall when he begins his last campaign as a Wolf athlete. Despite the fact that Loyola is not affiliated with any conference, Bill received prominent mention for All-Southern honors in both 1926 and 1927. He was nicknamed by sport writers "the gamest guy in the world" by reason of the fact that he played through the entire 1926 season with broken bones in each heel which resulted in painful injuries that would have kept a less courageous player on the sidelines.

Captain-Elect Peter Miller

Fast and aggressive, a deadly tackler, and a capable receiver of forward passes, Pete combines all the requisites of the ideal terminal, and for another year, at least, Coach Shaughnessy need lose no sleep over the right end position. With Miller and Palm performing in gilt-edge fashion through the past two seasons, opponents' gains around the Wolf terminals have been so small as to appear negligible. Pete is one of the best blockers and tacklers on the squad, and his play aids in no small measure the long jaunts frequently made by the ball carriers.

Alternate Captain Buck Moore

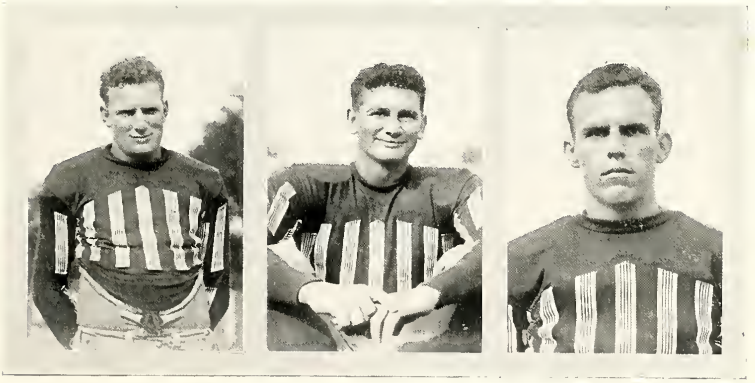
The player who was hardest hit by the jinx which camped on the Maroons' trail during the past season in the form of injuries was none other than Alternate Captain Buck Moore, the "Dixie Flyer." After a phenomenal year in 1926, during which the Loyola flash surpassed "Red" Grange's mark for yardage gained in a single season, and attained a position of national prominence, great things were predicted for last season, but an almost fatal injury in the Howard game when he had to be carried unconscious to a Birmingham hospital, left its mark on the Wolf ace and kept him from regaining his true form for the rest of the year. Better luck next fall, Buck!

Alternate Captain-Elect Cal Cooper

Acclaimed the most consistent player to wear the Maroon and Gold last fall, Cal was the recipient of the annual award to that player "who, through consistent and continued application contributes most to the making of a greater Loyola eleven, but who is kept in the background and fails to get proper recognition." Cal's specialty is diagnosing opponents' plays and breaking through the line to block punts and make himself a nuisance generally to the opposing eleven. Quiet and unassuming, he is one of the most popular members of the squad.

Aubrey Budge

"The best player, pound for pound, I have ever seen in action." This tribute was paid "Ike" during the past grid season by a well known sports writer, and to this might be added that he is just about as courageous a player as ever played football anywhere. The end of every game last year found Budge occupying a cot at the Hotel Dieu, but the following Saturday invariably found him in the starting line-up, raring to go. His body, a mass of bruises and contusions, the result of bucking up against men twice his size, "Ike" never weakened, but played on until forced to retire through sheer exhaustion. He, more than any other individual, was responsible for the brilliant record hung up by the Wolfpack last fall, and as such, was awarded a silver loving cup at the annual grid banquet. Elusive as an eel, he led all his teammates in point scoring, and led the opposition to a merry chase, trying to keep up with him. As a blocking and interfering back, he has no equal among Coach Shaughnessy's crew.



Clarence Palm

This tall blond lad has been a real "tower of strength" in the Wolf forward wall since he first became eligible for varsity competition in 1926. He performed at center on the freshman eleven in '25, but was shifted to end the following year and exhibited such adeptness at his new berth that he was named All-Louisiana terminal that fall. Last season the graduation of A. D. Smith left Coach Shaughnessy without a capable pivot, and Clarence was converted back into a center, at which position he starred consistently.

Charley Cotten

Never a spectacular player, Charley has received far less than the amount of credit due his achievements as a Wolf for the last two campaigns. He is extremely light for a guard, weighing only 160 pounds, yet he has played through two years of bone-crushing football, always in the thick of the fight and invariably at the bottom of the pile. Without Cotten at his guard post to open the holes, spectators would have witnessed fewer sensational dashes by the backs, and the Wolves would have scored fewer markers than were chalked up during the two seasons in which he has played.

Albertus Kreider

Acclaimed last year as the youngest football player among the country's larger universities (he was just eighteen), "Goat's" lack of weight kept him from starting the different contests, but he broke into the line-up at one time or another in practically every setto. He possesses the ideal football temperament—even-tempered, always willing to take advice, but capable of being aroused to a fighting pitch at the first threatening motions on the part of the adversary and possessing a never-say-die determination.

Tiny Drouilhet

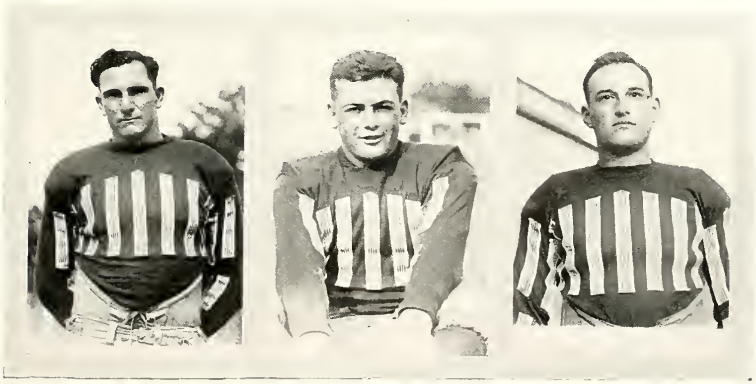
This big fellow is one of the Wolves' best bets for All-Southern recognition next fall. In several games "Tiny" has had to "go easy" for fear of seriously injuring his opponents, but on the few occasions on which he has lined up against men of his size, he has shown that he is worthy of being classed as one of Dixie's premier tackles. Standing well over six feet and weighing more than two hundred pounds, the giant Wolf athlete is a star basketball and track man, in addition to his gridiron aspirations. He was elected captain of the cagers in 1927 and broke the Southern record with the javelin in that same year. He was awarded the Godchaux Cup as Loyola's best all-around athlete.

Don Maitland

Coming up from high school, Don brought a reputation as a battering fullback along with him, and in the two seasons in which he played this position as a Wolf, has added many laurels to his already healthy crop. The game with the Indians found the stalwart fullback rising to his greatest heights. With most of the other backs forced from the combat because of injuries, and the Pack facing its first defeat in three seasons, Don single-handedly rammed his way time and again through the giant Indian line. A great player, Don.

Ham Weddle

A line crasher of proven ability, a better-than-average punter, a sterling defensive back. Ham enjoyed a great year in the Wolf backfield during the 1927 season. With Maitland and Dantone, he carried the burden of the line-plunging throughout the campaign and performed nobly. As a freshman, Ham was merely one of many substitute ends, but given a chance to carry the ball the following fall, he blossomed forth as a real prospect. And then, trying his hand at kicking, he was hailed as the find of the season.



Clarence Galle

An All-Southern lineman in high school, and with a year of freshman football behind him, during which he captained the yearlings from the center berth, "Brute" made his debut at tackle last fall and held down a regular job throughout the campaign. A giant in size, he is a power in the line, being one of the most aggressive and fearless linemen at Shaughnessy's command. He has two more years of grid warfare ahead of him, and is looking forward to even bigger and better things in the future.

Tynes Mixon

One of the heftiest men on the squad, "Mix" has been used advantageously at center, guard and tackle, and has performed equally well wherever he has been placed. In fact, at Magnolia High School, as a member of which eleven he was awarded All-Mississippi honors, he was a fullback. The over-abundance of ball carriers and a dearth of heavy linemen prompted Coach Shaughnessy to convert the new heavyweight into a line candidate. With Galle and Rheams out of the Haskell game with injuries, "Mix" filled the center post in fine style, and later in the season was used at other line positions with equally successful results.

Wallace Rheams

As an understudy to Palm at the center position, "Skinny" broke into almost every game last year, and his advent resulted in no decrease in effectiveness on the part of the Maroon Cyclone. Though lacking in weight, he makes up for his deficiency by fighting all the harder, and calling into service all the advice and resources placed at his command through conscientious and painstaking months of practice. He is a steady, dependable performer, and the absence of about thirty pounds is the only obstacle between him and a first-string job.

Charley Jaubert

Though burdened with earnest pursuit of his many musty law books, Charley finds time to play football, basketball and baseball equally well. During the fall he acted as general utility man, being called upon to appear at end, guard, quarterback and fullback at varying intervals. He is the possessor of a real, honest-to-goodness football brain, and is invaluable in this respect. His line-plunging makes him a dandy fullback prospect, but his weight qualifies him for a line job. Consequently he alternates between the two and does both jobs well.

Joe Decell

Joe is another end gone wrong. Accustomed to playing this position, he wasted an entire year watching Miller and Palm cavort around the terminal posts before he realized that he should have been a fullback all the time. Once given a chance in the backfield, Joe caused the opposing elevens (and the regular backs) no end of worry. He got a chance to carry the oval against each of the Wolves' opponents last season and proceeded to batter the forward wall in a manner which won him much praise.

Joe Dantone

Facially a dead ringer for the famous Joe Guyon who blazed a meteoric trail across the Southern football firmament some years back, Joe possesses many of the traits which dominated the play of the noted Indian. Fewer faster men have been seen on a local football field, and Joe is one of the finest running and passing backs seen in New Orleans in some years. He passes a ball with bullet-like speed and accuracy, is a crackerjack interfering back and a smashing line-plunger. He just blossomed into the latter during the 1927 season when his lunges netted touchdowns on more than one occasion.

Herby Pourciau

The recipient of the Holmes trophy in 1927 as the best student athlete at the university, "Disou" has starred at football, basketball and baseball, and should be a capable track man in the near future Before coming up from high school, columns had been written about Disou's baseball and basketball prowess, but no mention was made of football. The fact was, the New Iberia lad had never touched a pigskin. He experimented in his freshman year and found that his ability at other sports fitted him ideally for football, and he has held down both end and halfback roles with equal deftness.

J. Y. Gilmore

Too much speed, but no control, is the keynote of Jay's grid performance. A track star of real merit, one of those often heard of but seldom seen "ten-second men," only the inability to cut back and thread his way through opposing tacklers keeps Jay from being one of the Wolves' biggest offensive threats. As it is, his dazzling speed keeps the opposing ends and halfbacks constantly on edge, and there is scarcely a game in which he does not elude them at least once and break away for a long jaunt.

Andrew Giordano

"Big Daig" played on the Morgan City High School eleven which furnished Don Maitland, Aubrey Budge and Jay Gilmore to the Wolves, and he was just as valuable in the line as they were in their respective backfield positions. For four years he was named as a tackle on the mythical All-Louisiana high school eleven and was Southern prep tackle as well. With Drouilhet and Cooper occupying the Wolf tackle berths, "Big Daig" had little chance to show his stuff last fall, but his two hundred-odd pounds will probably be used more often from now on.

Charley Keller

After a year spent on the bench nursing a bad knee, Charley made his debut as a varsity player last fall and broke into many games at a guard berth. Keller came to the Wolves from the Baton Rouge high school eleven, where he was captain in his last year, besides being a stellar lineman through the entire four seasons he was on the squad. He will be eligible for two more seasons.

Johnny Barnes

A victim of painful injuries time and again, "Tex" never has had a chance to demonstrate the ability he admittedly possesses. In his freshman year, 1925, he dislocated a shoulder blade, repeated this performance in the Loyola of Chicago game the following fall, and fell victim to all sorts of maladies between that date and the end of the 1927 season. Every now and then he recovered sufficiently to play a scintillating game at quarterback for a brief spell before again finding himself unable to get off the ground after a particularly hard tackle. With just the ordinary amount of good fortune next fall, "Tex" will make them all sit up and take notice.

Alten Allen

Playing his initial season with the Wolves last fall, "Pee Wee" performed very creditably at one end position, acting as understudy to Pete Miller. The high spot of his performance came in the Loyola of Baltimore tilt when he grabbed a thirty-yard toss from Lopez and scampered across the line for the final score in the last half-minute of play. "Pee Wee" also occupied a guard berth for a brief period and showed to excellent advantage. He possesses plenty of weight, height, intelligence and ambition, and that's about all it takes to make a classy footballer.

Junior Lopez

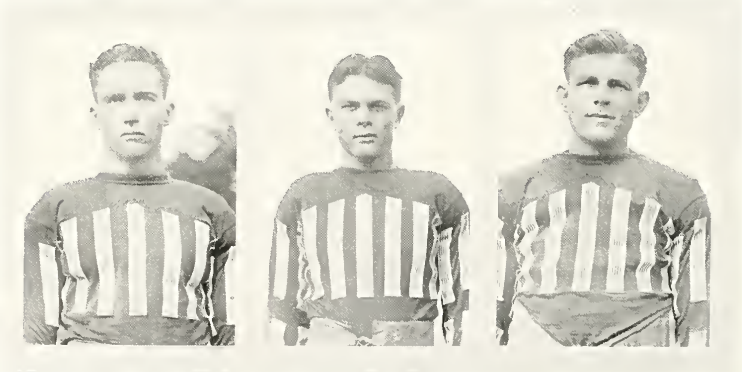
"The best quarterback prospect that has come under my eyes since I've been coaching" is what Coach Shaughnessy dubbed this Biloxi youth after the Howard clash last fall, which was the occasion of Junior's varsity debut. As a freshman he had warmed the bench in game after game, and only injuries to Moore, Barnes, Decell and Dantone prompted Shaughnessy to give the green substitute the reins against Howard. But once seen in harness, Junior gave his mentor such an eyeful that he was called upon to enter every game from that moment on, and showed his heels to more than one opposing end.

Pat Simmons

Pat's chief claim to fame is the title bestowed on him during his freshman year as "the biggest prevaricator at the university," but this accomplishment detracts not a wit from the calibre of his football playing. A gridder with a temperament like Pat's is invaluable to a football team, for no surer cure for dependency can be prescribed than a good bull session, and when the subject in hand pertains to "bull," Pat is in a class by himself. He has to be heard to be appreciated.

Bill Roberts

"Bill" is another of the many fine players Baton Rouge High has sent up to Loyola, and when he came he was heralded as the best man of his weight ever sent out by the upstate prep school. His performances as a yearling and in one year of varsity ball bear out all the nice things said of him. Bill is a guard and a mighty good one, having made all-state prep in 1925. He was unfortunate in having been preceded by such fine guards as Ritchey and Cotten, but he has two years ahead of him and is getting better all the time.



Malcolm Simmons

A product of the Magnolia Hi, which sent Mixon, Allen and Simmons to the Wolfpack, "Cat" is reticent, retiring and modest, but a fighter withal, and a promising lineman. He possesses a fine competitive spirit which will carry him a long way in the two remaining seasons he has before him as a member of the Maroon Cyclone. In addition to being a prospective grid star, "Cat" is adept at basketball and was one of the most accurate goal tossers of the yearling cage five in '26.

Hilary Gaudin

Hilary has the distinction of being the only Wolf of the pack to have completed three years of service, and consequently has completed his grid career. He played under Coaches Ducote, Reed, and Shaughnessy, and learned plenty of football in those three years, being used at halfback, tackle and guard from time to time. Practically every contest saw Hilary playing a goodly portion of the time, and his efforts contributed in no small measure to the many Wolf triumphs.

Joe Biundo

Despite his small stature, Biundo is a fine running back and is as cool under fire as a block of ice, a pair of traits that will stand him in good stead in the future. "Bingo" also plays basketball and baseball when the time comes to doff the moleskin. It was "Bingo's" misfortune to happen along just at a time when Coach Shaughnessy was supplied with an overabundance of pigskin tossers, but his turn will come next fall, and a big showing is expected of him.

Lynwood Carpenter

When a fellow withstands all the hard knocks that were meted out to "Carp" and still comes back for more, he possesses a lot more than the mere ambition to be a football player. Shortly after matriculation "Carp" reported at the stadium for his first scrimmage. Two injuries in rapid succession, a broken nose and a dislocated shoulder, left him incapacitated for a few weeks. Despite these setbacks, "Carp" made his freshman numeral before the season was over.

Varsity Football, 1927

Resume of Season

Facing a series of misfortunes such as seldom befalls a team during the course of a single season, the Wolfpack of '27 managed to stave off defeat on all but two occasions to go through as rigorous a schedule as any Loyola eleven has had to face with a record of six games won, two tied and two lost. Only one eleven, Loyola of Chicago, was able to score more than one touchdown against the Wolves despite the fact that a veritable epidemic of injuries infested the squad and kept it from attaining its true form.

Practically every man was forced to the sidelines at one time or another during the grueling season. Buck Moore, prominently mentioned as All-Southern halfback in 1926, and the ace ball carrier of the Pack, was severely injured in a preliminary contest and was unable to play regularly during the rest of the season. Aubrey Budge, who rose from obscurity in 1926 to flash as the brightest of stars in 1927, was battered and bruised in game after game, and in no condition to withstand the constant hammering of men twice his size, which diminished his effectiveness to a minimum toward the end of the season. With their attack thus lessened through the loss of these and several other ball carriers through minor injuries, and of no less than ten of the linemen by the same cause, the Wolves deserve only the highest praise for their gallant efforts in rolling up a point total of 132 as compared to the thirty-nine allowed the oppositions.

The Games as They Were Played

Rice 0; Loyola 13.

Dedicating the newly improved stadium in fitting style, the Wolves scored a convincing victory over J. W. Heisman's Rice Institute gridders, one of the strongest of the Southwest Conference elevens, by a 13 to 0 score. After getting a touchdown in each of the first two periods and holding the Owls to nary a first down, Coach Shaughnessy's crew took things easier in the second canto and failed to add to its point total. A Rice fumble, followed by plunges by Maitland and Budge together with a pass, Moore to Drouilhet, placed the oval on the two-yard line, from where Drouilhet scored. Budge's fifteen-yard off-tackle dash and another pass to Drouilhet put the ball in position for Drouilhet to annex the second marker.

Howard 0; Loyola 0.

Invading a foreign gridiron for the first time in two years, the Maroon Cyclone all but suffered its first defeat in three seasons. Crippled by the absence of Cotten, Barnes, Roberts, Dantone, and Decell through injuries, the Wolves were unable to score in the face of the stiff opposition offered by the Howard Bulldogs, and had to be satisfied with a scoreless tie. Early in the second quarter the Maroons' most brilliant offensive back, Bucky Moore, was severely injured after a beautiful dash which put the ball on the twelve-yard line, and had to be removed to a Birmingham hospital. From that point on, the Wolf attack failed to function with its accustomed aggressiveness, and when Budge was forced to the sidelines in the last quarter, his mates were thrown on the defensive. They managed to keep the Bulldogs at a respectable distance from the goal, but were too demoralized by losses through injuries to present any offensive.

Loyola of Baltimore 0; Loyola 19.

Carrying on without Bucky Moore, the main cog of the backfield, and Brute Galle, regular pivot, the Maroons weathered their first intersectional clash by humbling the Loyola University of Baltimore eleven by a three-touchdown margin. After checking a threatening Green and Gray advance in the opening minutes of play, the Cyclone tore down the field and before the initial period was half over Budge had romped around left end for a six-pointer, and Maitland had kicked goal. With one offensive effort behind them, the Wolves settled down to play defensive football, and it was two minutes before the end of the game before any additional points were chalked up. Intercepting a pass from Enright, Pete Miller placed the oval on the visitors' goal line after a short dash, and Dantone went over for the touchdown. Allen grabbed a fifteen-yard toss from Lopez to score the final marker.

Union 6; Loyola 40.

The Cyclone displayed the same crushing offensive which characterized its devastating performances in 1926 when it swept a sturdy band of red-jerseyed Union gridders from its path to annex a 40 to 6 addition to the win column. The lone Union touchdown was the result of a blocked punt and proved to be the sum total of the visitors' offensive efforts, for they failed to register a single first down against the impregnable defense exhibited by the Wolf forward wall, led by the efforts of Captain Ritchey, Palm, Cooper and Miller. Aubrey Budge's spectacular dashes through the tackles accounted for three of the Wolf markers.

Southwestern 0; Loyola 28.

The Southwestern Bulldogs provided a mild surprise to the New Orleans football world by holding the Maroon Cyclone to a 28 to 0 score in sixty minutes of hard playing. After threatening twice but failing to score in the opening quarter, the Wolf attack gained added velocity in the later periods and scored four times before the final whistle. Bucky Moore celebrated his short-lived return to the lineup by scampering twenty-two yards to the first touchdown. The line plunging abilities of Maitland and Dantone were responsible for the other three Wolf tallies.

St. Edwards 6; Loyola 6.

The second surprise package of the season was opened in the presence of the Wolves when the unheralded St. Edwards College eleven of the Texas Conference gave them such a scare that they were actually relieved when the final score was announced as 6-all. The homelings approached the St. Edwards goal line twice without being able to muster the necessary punch to put over a tally until, in the second quarter, a pass from Moore to Budge for twenty yards, and two plunges by Maitland put theball on the six-yard line. Budge squirmed through left tackle for the score. It was not until the final period that the Texans put over the tying marker. After having advanced within the Wolves' ten-yard line on three different occasions only to be thrown back when the last white line was almost under foot, St. Eds came right back to score after an advance from midfield. A pass, Stevens to O'Shaughnessy, put the oval on the one-yard line, from where Captain O'Shaughnessy hurled himself over center for the touchdown.

Haskell Indians 3; Loyola 0.

Fighting the Haskell Indians, who boast of not having lost a game at home in twenty-six years, to a standstill through fifty-eight minutes of the most arduous playing Lawrence, Kansas, has seen in years, the Wolves found a three-year string of nineteen consecutive victories shattered by the mighty foot of Captain Albert Hawley who, like a real chieftain, personally booted the goal that gave his braves a 3 to 0 triumph over the Southern invaders. With Bucky Moore on the sidelines nursing a badly twisted ankle, and Aubrey Budge in such shape that, although he gamely stuck to his halfback post until the end, he collapsed on the field as the final whistle sounded, the Wolfpack had little to offer in the way of an offense save the terrific line smashing of Maitland. Toward the end of the second quarter they made a determined bid to score, but failed when, the oval on the five-yard stripe, a pass was grounded behind the goal line. Breaking through the worn and weary Wolf line, which struggled through the contest without Charley Cotten, the regular guard, and with Brute Galle, center, playing despite a chipped bone in his hand, the Redskins knocked down Drouilhet's punt and recovered on the five-yard mark. With two minutes of play remaining, Hawley dropped back and deftly booted the oval high and far, squarely between the posts.

Loyola of Chicago 12; Loyola 19.

Aubrey Budge led the Pack in one of its most brilliant performances of the season before a large homecoming day crowd and scored all three of the touchdowns which gave the battered Wolves their second decision in two years at the expense of the Ramblers of Loyola of Chicago. After the Cyclone had swept the length of the field for touchdowns in each of the first two stanzas, forty yards in penalties gave the Ramblers the ball on the Wolves' one-yard mark, from where Tony Lawless scored in two plays. Again in the third period the Windy City eleven crossed the goal. Sextro, who starred at end for the visitors, picked up a punt and raced to the eleven-yard line. On third down a pass from Johnson to Lawless knotted the score. A Wolf toss, from Lopez to Miller, set the scene for the winning marker by giving the Pack the ball on the eight-yard line from where Budge scored.

Lombard 6; Loyola 7.

Clashing with the Lombard eleven of Galesburg, Illinois, in its fourth intersectional skirmish of the season, the Wolfpack emerged victors by a 7 to 6 count when the vistors' offered unexpectedly strong resistance to the vaunted Maroon attack. After having been outplayed at every twist and turn during the first half and placed on the defensive as a result of Maitland's touchdown, and Dantone's successful try-for-point, the red-jerseyed western athletes came back in the second half to outfight the heavier Wolves, annexing nine first downs to Loyola's four, and scoring a touchdown of their own on an eight-yard plunge by "Mighty" Juberg. Nesti's place kick for the extra point was a trifle wide.

Quantico Marines 6; Loyola 0.

Unable to penetrate the airtight defense put up by the monstrous forward wall of the Quantico Marine eleven, the crippled Wolves were forced to bow before the superior strength of the Devil Dogs by a 6 to 0 score as a result of Jimmy Levey's perfectly executed twenty-three yard sprint through a maze of Wolf tacklers in the third period. Missing a touchdown by less than a yard when the half ended with the ball in the Wolves' possession on the Marines' goal line, the Loyola attack was smothered in the second half and never again threatened. Neither Moore nor Budge was able to remain in the contest on account of their crippled condition, and the rest of the Wolf backs were unsuccessful at hammering the bulky Marine forwards. Ham Weddle performed in gilt-edged fashion, slashing through guard and tackle for consistent gains in addition to holding up his end in a brilliant punting duel with Levy, and he was ably assisted in his efforts by Dantone and Maitland in the backfield, and Drouilhet, Cooper and Miller among the linemen, but the sea soldiers were too powerful for Coach Shaughnessy's crew in the final analysis, and kept them from putting over the score that would have knotted the count.

The wealth of yearling material which answered the call of Coaches A. D. Smith and "Red" Gremillion to the preliminary grid tryouts included players of a calibre which enabled the Freshmen of 1927 to take a place alongside of those of '25 as the most formidable yearling grid squad ever turned out at Loyola. Although the activities of the Frosh were confined in the main to practice tussles with varsity, the three outside games which were carded for them allowed the Baby Wolves to demonstrate conclusively the full power of their attack and the sturdiness of an impenetrable defense.

Under the guidance of Coaches Smith and Gremillion, several future greats were uncovered in the ranks of the lowly Cubs. Among this number may be classed Marchy Schwartz, Joe Tetlow, "Bull" Peskin, "Bum" Heier and Maurice Juge, all sterling ball carriers, and "Zeke" Bonura, Emmett Thomas, Clem Sehrt, "Country" Gilmore, Larue Breeland, Joe Blasi and Bob Smith, linemen. All of these men are fully capable of extending their respective varsity rivals and will make determined bids for regular berths in the fall.

Opening the regular season against the Miller Brothers' independent eleven, Captain Joe Tetlow led his Freshmen to a two-touchdown victory. In their initial start of the season the yearlings exhibited a hard-driving line and a fast, shifty set of backs, and won drawing away. Schwartz, frosh signal caller, was directly responsible for both touchdowns. In the second quarter after Lagarde of the Miller outfit had been downed behind the goal line on an attempted end run and the eventual winners had chalked up a safety, Schwartz heaved a thirty-yard pass to Heier for the first touchdown. In the final stanza Schwartz received a punt on his own 40-yard stripe and stepped off a brilliant piece of broken field running, aided by almost perfect interference, to cover the remaining sixty yards to the goal line, making the final count 15 to 0.

The Poplarville Aggies were the next to suffer humiliation at the hands of the Frosh. The Maroons displayed a heavy well-drilled forward wall which opened holes through which the ball-toters plunged for a marker in each of the four periods, meanwhile standing off the rushes of the Aggie backs. The Wolvelets took the lead early in the contest when, after bucks to Peskin, Juge and Schwartz had advanced the oval to midfield, a long toss, Schwartz to Blasi, scored the initial tally. Again, in the second quarter, the Frosh scored, this time when Schwartz reeled off a forty-yard jaunt around left end. A pass, this time from Schwartz to Bonura, enabled the latter to scamper ten yards to the goal line, making the score 18 to 0. Plunges by Juge, Hebert, Schwartz and Richards advanced the ball to the scoring zone again in the final canto and, after a pass to Avinger had placed the oval on the one-yard line, Hebert piled over left guard for the last tally.

Freshman Basketball

The yearling cage squad finished an unusually successful season with a record of seven games won and two lost. Playing through an eleven-game card without the services of a coach or a regularly scheduled series of games, they dropped only one series—to the Poplarville Aggies in the last games of the season.

Previous to these defeats, the Frosh, under the guidance of "Zeke" Bonura, who acted as coach and captain, in addition to starring in every game at his forward berth, had won over such well known and highly respected aggregations as the Mississippi State Normal Varsity, the Houma Y. M. C. A., the alumni five, and three contenders for the local senior league title, the Elks, the Warriors and Kingsley House.

The crowning achievement on the credit side of the Cubs' ledger were, of course, the Normal victories. These games were played on the Hattiesburg Y. M. C. A. floor, and were the first losses suffered by the Teachers on their home courts in history. The passing of the entire Cub outfit was too much for the Mississippians in the initial setto, and the Frosh got away to a good start and had assumed a safe lead before the halfway point was reached. With Bonura, Breland and Heier caging goals in rapid succession, the Maroons had a 53 to 40 advantage as the closing whistle sounded.

The final game was a thriller from start to finish, with the teams battling hard for every point. But the Cubs finished with a desperate rally to take down a 52 to 60 decision. The count was knotted at 37-all at the half, but in the second stanza the Wolvelets put more power into their attack and soon drew away to victory. Bonura and Heier were again poison insofar as the Teachers were concerned, each getting nine goals from the floor.

The knowledge of the game and the teamwork displayed by the Frosh, combined with a little eagle-eyed basket tossing, enabled them to win both ends of a two-game series from the Houma "Y" outfit by a comfortable margin. In the first affair, Captain Bonura, Breland and Heier caged shots from all angles with apparent ease, and had assumed a 22 to 4 lead at the half. The subs saw service in the second half and kept the homelings at a respectable distance from the goal. In the second game Bonura's ten field goals took all the starch out of the "Y" players, and enabled the Cubs to win almost as they pleased.

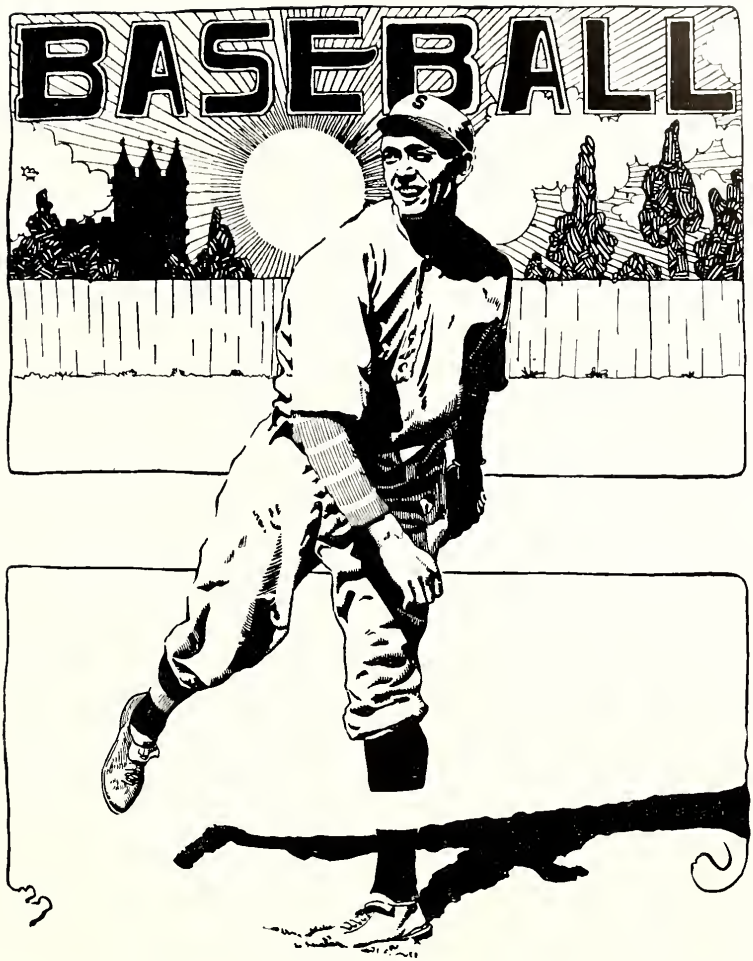
The baby Wolves had an easier time in their home contests with the local independent fives, defeating the Kingsley cagers on two separate occasions, 47 to 15 and 36 to 11, humbling the Elks by a 70 to 35 score; the Warriors 61 to 6. The Alumni five, composed of former Wolf cage luminaries, were humbled by a count of 62 to 9.

Going into the final series against the undefeated Poplarville Aggies with an equally unblemished record, the Cubs jumped off on the wrong foot and found themselves on the short end of a 55 to 35 count after the first night's play. Bonura annexed his usual ten field goals for his mates' benefit, but Boyd and Hillman broke away from the Maroon guards time and again to toss field goals almost at will. The Frosh put up a stiffer defense in the second and final contest, and outmaneuvered the visitors for a while, baffling them with a fast floor game and accurate goal tossing, but finally slowed down to a point where the visitors drew ahead to win by a 39 to 25 score.

"Zeke" Bonura and "Bum" Heier, Frosh forwards, were the big guns of the Cub offense during the course of the 1928 season. Bonura accounted for more than half the total points scored by his team. His own efforts added 226 points to the Cubs' column—107 field goals and twelve foul tosses, or an average of 25 points a game. Heier with 126 points was a big factor in each victory.



BASEBALL

The 1927 Season

Faced with an unusual dearth of material and a schedule which included games with the cream of the collegiate baseball talent found in this part of the country, the Wolf ball tossers experienced a rather unsuccessful season. In all, the Maroons were able to chalk up but four victories and a single dead heat in sixteen starts. The games won were one from each of the following: Southwestern, Louisiana State, Birmingham-Southern and Mississippi College.

Loyola opened the campaign with the Southwestern Bulldogs of Lafayette, La., and had to be content with an even break in the two-game series played in the upstate town. Ineffective hurling on the part of Texas Barnes and Charley Jaubert, the latter a converted third sacker, allowed the homelings to assume a big lead and to take down the decision by an 11 to 0 score. While Wolf misplays were paving the way for Bulldog tallies, Long Jim Halloway held the Wolf batters to three hits. The second game found Jaubert apparently better off for having hurled four innings the previous afternoon and he easily mowed down the Bulldog swatters. He allowed only three hits, but Wolf errors helped the upstaters score three runs, while Pourciau, LeBlanc, A. D. Smith and Decelle were hitting to amass a total of eight runs.

Spring Hill's crack Badger outfit opened the local season by taking two slugfests by decisive scores—15 to 4 and 15 to 10. Joe Tedesco, ace hurler of the Hillians, gave up only four hits, two of them circuit clouts by Maitland and LeBlanc, in the initial contest. In the second setto a six-run rally by the Wolves in the sixth canto failed to overcome the visitors' early lead.

The visit of the L. S. U baseballers set the scene for the Wolves to annex their second victory. After dropping the first game 11 to 4, thanks to the vicious hitting of the Tiger batters, a slashing attack by Coach Walker's proteges enabled them to deliver the goods by a 9 to 7 count in the second tussle.

The 1927 Season

In a pair of return games played at Baton Rouge, the Tigers handed the Loyolans the wrong end of the count on both occasions. "Red" Mike Smith, Tiger portsider, got back at the Wolves for the disrespectful manner in which they had treated his offerings in the second local game by setting them down with two hits in the first contest. "Disou" Pourciau hurled a fine game for the Wolves, giving up six safe blows, but the inner works proved to be anything but airtight, and the Bengals gathered five runs to salt away a 5 to 0 decision. The Tigers found Donovan's curves much to their liking in the final battle, and sent him to the showers with a barrage of two-base clouts in the first inning. They continued their assault at the expense of Jaubert, and iced away the decision in the second stanza with a six-run lead. Meanwhile the Wolf batters got after "Gravy" Grevemberg and crossed the plate four times, but the damage was already done, and the final count was 11 to 5

The Birmingham-Southern Panthers took the lead in a four-game series by pounding out a decisive victory in the second game played in Birmingham after the first had resulted in a 6 to 6 deadlock. Jumping over to Clinton, Miss., the Wolfpack enjoyed its first victory in weeks by slapping out a 15 to 10 decision over Mississippi College in a hectic, loosely played game.

On the last lap of the longest jaunt ever attempted by a Wolf nine, Coach Walker's men stopped off at Mobile to drop the remaining two games of the Spring Hill series. Coach Daly, former Wolf mentor, had his badgers primed for their best efforts and they hammered out a pair of victories by counts which left no doubt as to which was the better outfit.

In the final series of the season the Birmingham-Southern Panthers took the first game 13 to 8, after getting an early lead on Huey Rogers, but dropped the second when a last inning rally gave the Wolves an 8 to 7 decision.

Track

The official debut of the first cinder squad in Wolf history was anything but a brilliant success. Competing against the cream of the nation's track artists in the annual Rice relays at Houston, Texas, the Maroons failed to place a man in any event. Ray Drouhilet, who had done better than 140 feet with the discus in practice, hurled it 128 feet for fourth place. But for an unfortunate mishap Jay Gilmore would probably have placed the Wolves in the scoring column in the 100-yard dash. In the trial heat, Jay beat the gun and was set back a yard and a half, but despite this handicap he finished third.

The Maroon squad took down fourth place in the first annual Southwestern Relay Carnival at Lafayette, La. Drouilhet annexed three second places for a total of nine points to show the way to his mates in point scoring. He scored in the shotput with a heave of 41 feet, 11½ inches, and tossed the discus slightly less than the winning mark of 134 feet, 7 inches. The Maroon quarter-mile relay team comprising Captain Aubrey Budge, Jay Gilmore, Charley Almerico and Joe Dantone, finished second in its event, while Ray Stulb, Jay Gilmore, Petty Smith and Joe Dantone, running the half-mile and one-mile relays, finished third and second in these events.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS

That athletic competition at Loyola is not confined to those students capable of attaining varsity letters is shown by the facts that intramural games among men not competing for varsity positions were sponsored in four sports during the past year. Over a hundred students took part in the intramural contests, which were staged under the auspices of the Student Council, and consisted of a tennis tournament, the first attempted at Loyola, a handball tourney, a series of interdepartmental basketball games, and a football series.

Football

Three elevens made the race in the 1927 intramural football league, representing the Freshmen, the Sophomore, and the Junior classes. Play was conducted on an elimination basis, the Sophs eliminating the yearlings by an 8 to 6 count in the first game, only to bow to the superior play of the Juniors in the titular contest, 6 to 0.

Scoring early in the initial quarter on Russo's plunge over the goal line from the two-yard stripe, the Sophs salted away the first game when Reed, right end, threw Bono, frosh halfback, for a safety in the second period. Mula scored for the yearlings when he bucked the oval from the four-yard line.

In the final game the Juniors annexed the only marker after recovering a Soph fumble on the 22-yard line. A pass, Landry to Murphy, put the ball on the five-yard mark, from whence Clark took it over on two off-tackle thrusts.

Basketball

Led by the accurate goal-tossing of Bill McGovern and Johnny Hunter, the Freshmen Arts and Science five took a strangle hold on first place in the intramural cage race and were never headed. The yearlings survived both the Arts and Science eliminations, and the championship outfits of the other departments without the loss of a game.

In the preliminary round, played against the other Arts fives, the Freshmen, after winning from the Seniors on a forfeit, disposed of the Sophs and the Juniors by the convincing scores of 42 to 20 and 66 to 18, respectively.

Meanwhile, the Junior five was fighting its way through the eliminations in the Dental Department, and the Junior Pharmacists had annexed the Pharmacy title. These three teams squared off to do battle for the championship, the Arts and the Pharmacy fives meeting for the right to engage the Dentists in the finals.

The Freshmen five encountered their toughest opposition of the series and barely eked out a 25 to 22 triumph over the Pharmacists in a gruelling game, by far the closest and best played of the tournament. Petrie, with five field goals, did heroic work for the winners, but it was only their floorwork and team play that overshadowed the individual brilliancy of Pourciau and Biundo of the losers, each of whom rung in five field goals.

Playing the Dentals for the title, the Arts hoopsters had an easier time and vanquished their foes by an eleven-point margin, 31 to 20. McGovern, Petrie and Hunter, who starred consistently for the Frosh throughout the tourney, again played a fine game, as did Schwartz, Crane, Tetlow, Hebert and Sehrt. For the runners-up the work of LeBlanc, Smith and Barrodale stood out.

As a whole the tournament was a decided success. The games, while they naturally suffered in comparison with the varsity clashes, were well-played and hard fought, and several men were uncovered who should be heard from next year. The teams showed fine sportsmanship and a tendency to go right on fighting until the last whistle, despite the size of the score against them.

Handball

Herby Pourciau and Frank Mumfrey, of the Pharmacy department, survived a field of eleven entries to take down the intramural handball championship in the annual tourney sponsored by the Student Council. Play in the games was fast and closely contested, the teams entered representing the cream of the university's handball talent.

In the elimination in the various departments, four teams fought their way through and entered the semi-finals. These were Ray Stulb and Paul Ganucheau, of the Law School, Arthur Calongne and Paul Petrie, of the Arts and Science department, Charles Rossner and Dan Rittner, of the College of Dentistry, and Herby Pourciau and Frank Mumfrey, of the College of Pharmacy.

Calongne and Petrie defeated Carter and Malloy, 21-18, Hebert and Toppino, 21-17, and Benet and Carbajal, 21-17, to attain the position of semi-finalists. Pourciau and Mumfrey trounced Cardno and Weingerter, 21-3, and beat Jurgens and Weilbacher to invade the semi-final brackets. Meanwhile, Stulb and Ganucheau, and Rossner and Rittner, having reached the semi-finals by reason of the fact that no other entrants made the race from these two departments, fought it out for a position in the finals, the former pair winning handily.

Pourciau and Mumfrey had little trouble in disposing of Calongne and Petrie, and moved on to the finals, where they turned back Stulb and Ganucheau, after dropping the first game by a score of 17-21. The final pair of contests went to the Pharmacy team, 21-13, 21-13, and Loyola's third annual handball tournament was over.

Tennis

The singles titles in the first annual tennis tourney, which found thirty-eight racquet wielders vieing for the trophies offered the winner in each class, were captured by Dick Drown and Tom Daigle. Drown survived a field of sixteen players to win the Class A singles, while Daigle took down the Class B title in the face of opposition from twenty-one other entrants.

In Class A, recruited from among the more experienced netmen, Veglia, Roth, Hanemann, and Drown came through the preliminary rounds in good shape and paired off to fight out the semi-finals. Roth eliminated Hanemann, and Veglia lost to Drown after a grueling two-hour duel, 4-6, 6-4, and 6-0. In the finals, Drown took the measure of Roth in straight sets to capture the championship.

In Class B, Daigle survived the four preliminary rounds to down Murphy in the finals and take down the title.

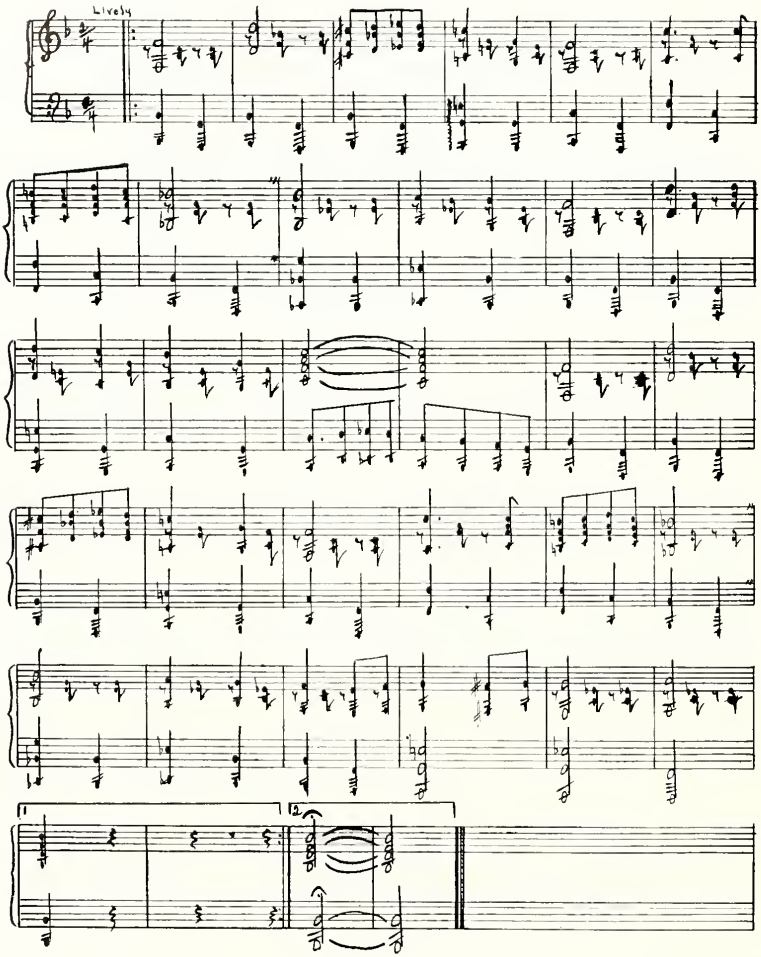
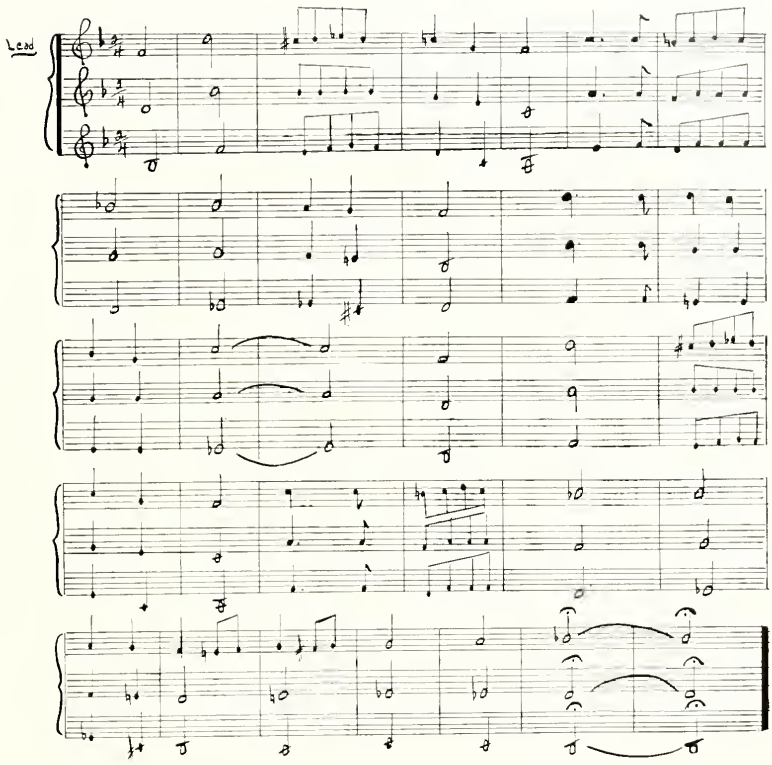
Loyola Victory March

Words and Music by Malcolm Leveque and H. Cupero

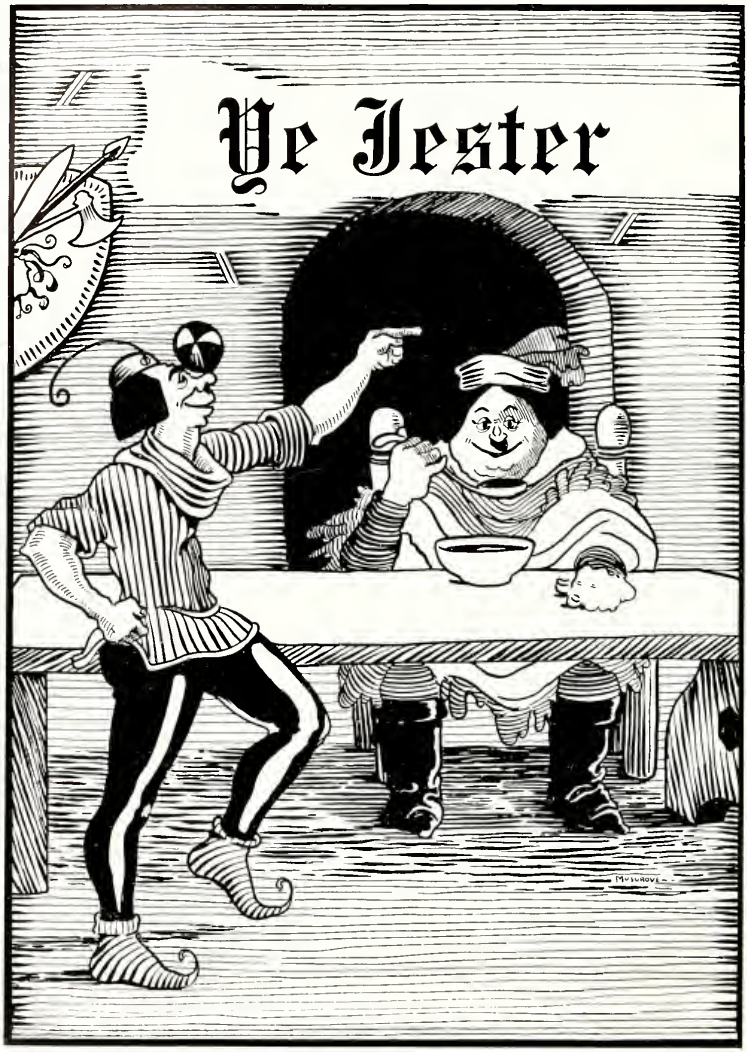




THE WORDS

Marching down the field to glory,
Fighting, to honor and to fame,
Dauntless and fearless,
The Wolves will win this game.

March on, victory is waiting,
Cheer boys, this is Loyola's day.
Our team will win with their might
For Loyola U.



Ye Jester

Snapshot of a Dental Student who has just discovered that he has extracted the wrong tooth after working on it for an hour.

Gremillion: "Does the law give a man the right to open his wife's letters?"
Dumestre: "Yes, buddy, but it doesn't give him the courage."

She was only a coal dealer's daughter, but holy smokes! where she had bin.

Chemistry Prof.: "Name some liquid that won't freeze."
Vincent: "Hot water."

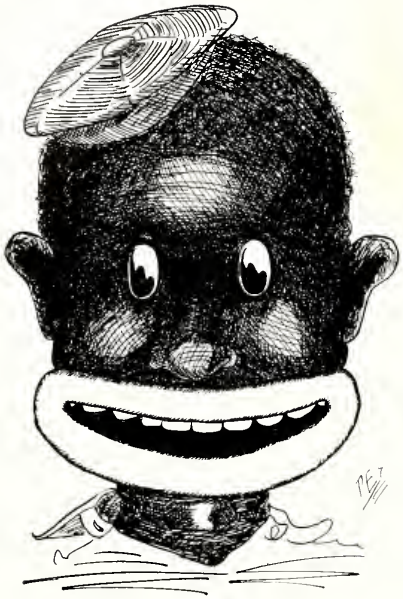
To every person comes his day
So calmly wait your chance;
Pedestrians have the right of way
When in the ambulance.

Much Ado About Nothing



OUR BEAUTY SECTION IN COLOR

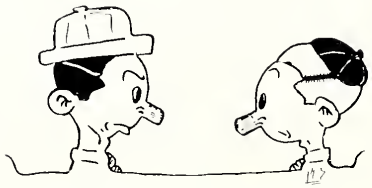
Chico, the shine boy, an enthusiastic aspirant for the title "Mista New Orleans," attributes his chances of winning to the fact that such beauty as his cannot be denied. He claims that four out of five have "it." He is the fifth. There is a reason. The photo bears this out very well. Wouldn't walk a mile for a Camel. They are too easy to bum off the boys at school. Doesn't care what the well-dressed man is wearing. Even if his best friend told him he wouldn't believe it. Rarely gets to the last drop. He generally passes out before that.

The Song

Beautiful and dumb,
  My own true love must be;
Beautiful so I'll love her,
  And dumb so she'll love me.

The Answer

Your silky satin skin
With radiance gleams akin
  To old ivory.
Your features finely sketched
Tell of beauty etched
  On old ivory.
Your brow, snow pure,
Is tinted, I'm quite sure,
  Like old ivory.
That tantalizing ear
Is surely carved, my dear,
  From old ivory
But love's withheld by fears
That between those perfect ears
  Is old ivory.



Soph: "I lost a lot of money last year."
Frosh: "Yeah? How?"
Soph: "I proposed to a rich girl, but she refused.

He: "Where did you do most of your skating when you were learning."
She: "Oh! I think you are horrid."

Rock-a-bye Senior on the tree top,
As long as you study, your grades will not drop,
But if you stop digging, your standing will fall,
And down will come Senior, diploma and all.

Prof: "Use statue in a sentence."
Abie: "Ven I came in last night, my papa says: "Stat you, Abie?'"

But they never will meet again,
For she was an east-bound cow,
And the other a west-bound train.

Bienvenu: "Ten yards' start."

"Then don't come hanging around me," announced the young flapper, "I'm not running a prep school."

"How I Crashed Society"

By Joseph Abraham, Jr.

An Interview with Benet Cain, Social Lion of Two Seasons

"Er—ah, you wish to see me?" asked the important man-about-town as I was ushered into his presence. "May I inquiah on what business, Mr. . . . er——"

"Abraham, sir," I replied weakly.

"Abraham, eh! Sorry to disappoint you, old chap, but I just donated my winter wardrobe to the Gentlewomen's Orphan Association. Raymond!" as he turned to his papers (bills, presumably—social lions have many unpaid bills), "Show the gentleman out."

"But, sir," I interjected, "I'm not an old-clothes dealer. I'm a reporter."

"Huh, what's that? Reportah!" he exploded, looking up suddenly and disgustedly. "Reportah, eh? How deucedly vulgah. A common news-hunting hound. Newspapah reportah!" And he made a thoroughly unmistakable gesture to his valet. "Show the gentleman out!"

"But, sir," I insisted, meantime keeping an anxious eye on Raymond, "I'm not an ordinary reporter. I'm feature editor on the staff of a magazine. Without your interview our publication cannot go to press. I would greatly appreciate a few words from you on how—"

"Just a second, sir, just a second," interrupted the peerless Cain, not unkindly. "You are not, by good fortune, the famous Arthur Brisbane, are you?" and he beamed upon me, almost fawned.

"No, sir," I shook my head sadly. "Sorry to disappoint you, sir, but—"

"Don't but me, young man," roared the social lion. "If you're not Arthur Brisbane, then you're undoubtedly affiliated with the advertising sheet known as Liberty. Five cents the copy! Bah! Raymond!"

"But, sir," I attempted to explain, "I'm in no way connected with Liberty. Our magazine is published annually. As I said before, I would appreciate—"

"What periodical do you represent?" he cut in. "Just the name and nothing more."

"The Wolf, sir," I began.

"Enough! Ah!—" and he again smiled graciously. "The Wolf. No doubt a scientific journal. But such a beastly vulgah name, a canine. Why not designate it as Dinosaur, or Brontisaurus, or, er—Oh! I say, what are your views on Evo'ution?"

"But, sir," I replied helplessly, "The Wolf is not a scientific journal, but—"

"—But a blood-thirsty Western story publication. Young man, I've had enough of your nonsense. Raymond—" this time he bellowed like a mortally wounded bull. "Show this impudent rascal out, at once!"

"But, sir, please let me explain!" eluding Raymond's ham-like c'aws. "The Wolf is not a Western story magazine, but a College Annual—"

"What College?"

"Loyola University, sir," I screamed, as Raymond crushed me in his powerful grasp, one hand on the nape of my neck and the other at the seat of my trousers.

"Loyola University?" he said delightedly. "Raymond, how dare you insult the gentleman! Well, well, well, Loyola, eh?" said the subdued social lion in dulcet tones. "Deah old Alma Mater. Loyola, did you say my boy?"

"Yes, sir," I replied, breaking away from his affectionate embrace. "You said it, old timer. Loyola, and The Wolf is the yearbook. Remember?"

"To be sure, you little imp. Now what can I do for you?"

"Well, you see, sir," I began with childish enthusiasm, "all the fellows up at school have gotten wind of your crashing the gate of the blue-bloods, and they want to know your recipe, formula, or whatever you employed in the process. See?"

"Hm-m, crash the gate of the blue-bloods? Bah Jove, I get you. You mean, my son, they want to know how I became a member of select society? Well, well, well, the deah boys! Go ahead. Fire away! Interrogate!"

"How?"

"What?"

"How, sir?"

"How be hanged! What are you driving at?"

"Well, you see, sir," I said trying to avert another storm, "in journalism we are instructed to get the what, the when, the who, the where, the why and the how of a story. Since we already know who you are, what you did, when you did it, where you did it, why you did it, there's only one thing left—the how. How did you do it, sir?"

"Gray shadows of London fogs! Who, what, how—" and the gentleman of ultra refinement leaped upon his desk, tearing his hair in rage. "Raymond!" he cried in a fury. "Throw the fellow out!" There was no need for Raymond. I deduced the gentleman was angry. I left.

"Mr. Bienvenu," I said next day to the editor, "here's Benet Cain's interview."

He read: "It is my sincere desire, concluded Mr. Cain, to see the United States increase its air force in the event we go to war with Japan."

Carefully folding the manuscript, the editor threw it into the waste basket.

If This Be Tragedy

By Donald Birdsong

Shapiro was in mortal danger. He had suspected the worst for several days, and now he knew. The world which had, up until a few days ago, seemed so beautiful, so bright, and so cheerful, now was bleak and cold and gray. This calamity was wrecking Shapiro's entire life. All his hopes, his dreams, his ambitions were blasted. His best friends had somehow found it out, and now looked at him askance, and avoided him, and at times David suspected them of whispering about him behind his back. Oh! Shades of Cretonne! Why had he been thus afflicted? Why could he not be happy and carefree, like Vincent? No! It could not be! Fate had decreed otherwise.

In vain, David tried to drown his sorrow with strong drink. Nightly, he could be seen carousing around Gluck's, Thompson's, Morrison's, and other night clubs, leaving only after curfew tolled the knell of parting night. Thus he continued until he was a mere shadow of his former self. No more did he walk about the campus, the envy of his fellow students. No more did he don those delirious golf trousers, so dear to his heart, and so admired by his classmates. Instead, he sneaked furtively about the campus, and avoided the public gaze as much as it was humanly possible to do so. Alas! He was no longer the Shapiro we all knew and loved so well.

No, dear reader, it was much worse than you suspected. It was not that dreadful disease, with which four out of every five are stricken; nor was it that awful affliction of which your best friends won't tell you. It was—Hydrolysis! Yes. Our own David was a Hydrolytic!

So you can easily see why David, who, after all, is human like the rest of us, Hess included, took his life. Yes. It seemed the only way out to him, poor, misinformed boy.

I caught a glimpse of her pale mauve hose,
I caught a whiff of—I think it was rose,
I saw at a glance her slim, graceful waist
But she hurried so fast I saw not her face.

I turned about and followed her flight
Till I caught her beneath a large arc light
"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"
And my heart stood still as she turned her head—
"Jus' home fum wuk, kind suh," she said.

She was bred in Old Kentucky, but she's only a crumb around here.

If it were not for the College men's clothes, what would the circus clowns copy?

Why is it that a girl in cotton stockings never sees a mouse?

They say that Diogenes has lost his lantern. Has he looked for it on the back of Chemical warfare?

Through the Week with Any Upperclassman Prior to a Quizz

FRIDAY

Is surprised when the professor announces there will be a graded quizz next Friday at 8 A. M.

MONDAY

Begins to figure how long it will take him to learn the subject.

TUESDAY

Decides that he can easily learn it by studying Wednesday and Thursday nights.

WEDNESDAY

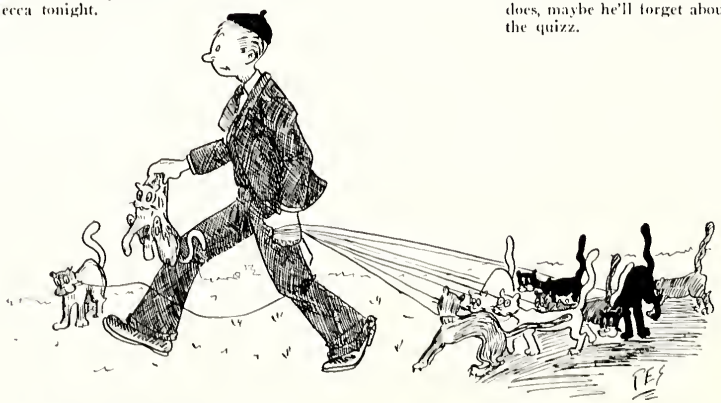
After looking it over he arrives at the conclusion that one night of good study will be plenty of time; besides, there is a good picture at the Mecca tonight.

THURSDAY

Feels sleepy. Decides to get up early the next morning and study. "It isn't hard anyway."

FRIDAY

After his room mate finally gets him out of bed at 7:30, concludes that there isn't enough time now. Maybe the Prof. won't come, and if he does, maybe he'll forget about the quizz.



Ambitious Freshman making a hundred in Biology when Prof. Merilh said: "Bring a cat and you'll get at least ten in the exam."

Nora, fresh from Ireland, stared at the baby's toy balloon which wavered at a place two or three feet higher than her head and was anchored to the back of a chair.

"'Tis quare and wonderful entirely!" she said, raising her hands, "to see it up and balancing itself—and it standing on a string."

THE PRIDE OF THE SOUTH

When the family comes down for the big game . . . and a glance at the stalwart son . . . have them stop at the Roosevelt. It's swank enough to write home about, but father can smoke his pipe in his room without feeling as though he should be shot at sunrise. It's really the South's friendliest hotel.

YOU CAN DEPEND ON WALTON TRAINING

Well trained accountants earn big pay because business needs them. The real problem is—what school offers the soundest, safest training?

The unequalled Walton record of student successes is the surest proof of the thoroughness of Walton methods.

Walton students have won 18 medals offered by the Illinois Society of Certified Public Accountants for high standing in the Illinois semi-annual examinations.

Walton courses have been adopted as standard by more than 100 leading Universities and Colleges.

A specialized school in Accountancy, Business Law and other Commerce subjects. Intensive courses —no time wasted. Write for handsome descriptive book: and state your interest in resident or non-resident courses.

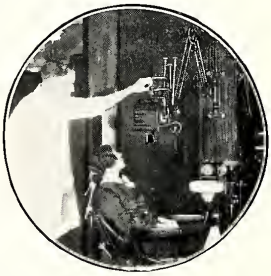
1 When a dentist with a "CDX" wants to see a probable hidden pathology, or wishes to check up his work—



2 He simply reaches over to the wall where the "CDX" is mounted on its extension bracket—

3 Positions it to the film in the patient's mouth—

4 Presses the button on the automatic hand timing switch, and the exposure is completed.

5 In approximately six minutes his office assistant will have the film developed and ready for interpretation.

Write for descriptive booklet on the "CDX" and names of authorized dealer distributors in your vicinity.
